April HVAC Tip: Optimize Your Thermostat for Spring Efficiency

With spring's unpredictable temperatures, now is the perfect time to fine-tune your thermostat settings for comfort and energy savings.

If you have a programmable or smart thermostat, take advantage of scheduling features to automatically adjust temperatures based on your daily routine. Setting your thermostat to adjust a few degrees while you sleep or when the house is empty can lead to noticeable energy savings without sacrificing comfort. Many smart thermostats also allow remote adjustments through your phone, making it easy to manage temperatures no matter where you are.

Additionally, consider switching your fan setting to "auto" instead of "on" to prevent your system from running constantly, which can lead to unnecessary wear and higher energy bills. Regularly checking and replacing your thermostat batteries, if applicable, ensures it functions properly when you need it most.

Making these small adjustments now can help lower your energy bills while keeping your home comfortable as we transition into warmer months. If you're interested in upgrading to a smart thermostat, our team is happy to help you find the right option for your home.
